NEW WARREN S87 SPORT YACHT

Flawless beauty, elegant styling and exhilarating performance define Warren Yachts' new S87 Sport Yacht from its shipyard in Brisbane, Australia. This is the first in a series of breakthrough sport yachts that Warren is building in fiberglass at their 15-acre site on the Brisbane River. The new S87 arrived in Ft. Lauderdale in October 2005.

"The new S87 is designed to appeal to the most sophisticated international tastes," says Dave Warren, founder of Warren Yachts. "She's the sport yacht, evolved to a higher and more elegant form. The detail, quality and finish we have achieved is as good as that of the world's finest custom yachts."

Warren was one of the first builders in the world to create and produce the sport yacht in its modern form. After 15 years of improvements and refinements, both open and flybridge models in 77 and 87 feet are available in a variety of three and four stateroom configurations. The wide selection of power and drive options include: conventional, surface piercing and water jet, which can produce top speeds of up to 60 mph.

The new S87 was conceived and designed to drive and feel more like a sports car than an 87-foot yacht. A low center of gravity results in superior handling and stability. In all aspects of performance she behaves like a thoroughbred. The helm responds instantly, acceleration is quick, smooth and quiet, lift to plane is effortless, turns are flat and controlled and tracking is straight. Add a custom builder's drive for perfection and the S87 becomes increasingly more irresistible.
